"MUSICAL SNOBS." The Richmond Examiner has a capital article on the subject of Musical Snobs, as they are called, who, with ut any knowledge or appreciation of the science of vocal and instrumental melody, flock to hear distin-

felt in their scule the full power of the har- from time to time, until completed. menies which fall upon their ears. The truth is, there is not in many American communities one person in a hundred who is sufficiently acquainted with artistic perfections in this line of execution, or who is sufficiently imbued with the requisite inspiration, to be Sm qualified either to enjoy or judge a performance of the kind by a master: for what enjoyment can there be in listening to sounds which one does not understand, and which are rendered exquisite only by their conformity to the nicest rules of art. An Italian Opera ena ted by the most ascomplished and He celebrated singers is no musical banquet to any one who is ignorant of the language in waich the sentiments of the song are expressed, unless he is possessed of the liveliest sensibilities to be acted on by the "concord of sweet sounds." For such a person to go off into estacies at Italian cadences or to attempt in such elated moments to criticise what he applauds, is simply to make a snob of himselt. Now, when Thalberg, or Paredi, or any other musical celebrity gives a concert, there is of course a crowded house-but not many auditors of either sex are really affected more than skin-deep, if as much as this, by the inimitable executions of the great performer. And yet there is a rapt at-tention in the crammed hall—a sublime expression of beatitude suffusing hundreds of faces-and impassioned outbursts just as if the very soul was about to meit away under the bewitching influences of the hour. For the most part this is mere affectation-or, to The to say the least, it is the display of a gratifica- Sar tion which is almost immeasurably in excess Es. of the reality. It is, however, a very harmless sort of extravagance, and is only worthy to be noticed as one of the striking tollies of

We do not mean by any thing that we have said to question the merits of any of the eminent and popular musical personages, foreign or native, whose entertainments in the way of operas and concerts have contributed so much to the enlivenment of our perple. Their professional talents we do not pretend to impeach. On the contrary, to such of them as we have heard from time to time, we have endeavored to pay the humble homage of our admiration in such terms as we could express it in, although on every such occasion we have labored under the disadvantage of an inartistic ear, and a critical acumen sadly at fault in the technicalities and profundities of their sci-

the day.

But we had forgotten the strictures of the Examiner which suggested these remarks. and to which we now return. Says that journal: - Petersburg Int. "The Musical Suob is generally a person of rather feeble powers of mind who has a vague impression that all persons of cultivation and refinement have a knowledge of music and patronize the operas and concerts, and that in order to maintain a respectable position in Snobdom it is absolutely necessary for him to affect an ecstatic appreciation and enjoyment of musical enter William W. He knows the names and histories of all the Prima Donnas and all the celebrated vocalists who have ever condescended to sing for his enjoyment and that of Snobdom. He criticises with minute accuracy the difference between Malibran and Sontag, Paredi and Jenny Lind. His knowledge of tenor, alto, contralto and soprano is wonderful beyond belief."

The appouncement of the marriage of L la Montez, Countess of Landsfelt, in Paris, has excited, says the Tribune, some inquiry as to who is the lucky bridegroom-the gensame generous sympathy that was extended to the man who bought the elephant! The Prince Shulkoski is a Polish nobleman, having two large estates-the dukedoms of Bicler and Blietz, in Austrian Silesia-the incomes from which are very large. In consequence of his Republican principles, the Prince was banished from his possessions (of the rents of which he was not deprived) for the period of ten years, which has now nestly expired. He has passed most of his time during his exile in this country. Lola is a passenger in the steamship America, under the name of Mrs Heald.
